

What is water pressure?

Water naturally flows down hill. A reservoir holds a lot of water and is usually quite high up. The weight of water in the reservoir provides the pressure to force water through pipes lower down. Water pressure is bigger if there is a greater height of water feeding the pipes below.

We can also increase water pressure with pumps, this can even allow us to pump water up hill.